NOTE

THIS small publication is the first of a series to be issued at intervals by the McGill University Library School. The importance of bibliography in library reference work, in individual investigation, and in special library service cannot be overestimated and should never be overlooked.

In Canadian bibliography much remains to be done in the historical field and in the bibliography of subjects and individuals. The compilers of the present list felt that the most appropriate beginning, for a Library School contribution to the subject, would be a classified and indexed bibliography of Canadian Bibliography. The work has been done under the personal supervision of Miss Marion V. Higgins, M.A., Instructor in Bibliography and Reference Work in the McGill University Library School, who has in preparation other lists that will follow at intervals in this series.

G. R. Lomer, Director

McGill University, Library School

FOREWORD

THE bibliography that follows has been prepared in the hope that it may be useful to students of subjects relating to Canada.

A complete list has not been the aim of the compilers, but rather a list of important and representative bibliographies that should be of use to students in various fields, so that brief lists that have later been included in more comprehensive bibliographies have been omitted. However, very brief lists have been included when the field was considered important and not adequately covered by other bibliographies. An attempt has been made to give, for each entry, author, title, place, publisher, date, and main paging; but these items have not always been available in the sources at command, and this will account for the omissions noted. In the main, the American Library Association cataloguing rules have been followed, but it seemed advisable to adopt certain variations of these rules out of deference to current usage in Canada. The most notable of these exceptions is the capitalization of all words in the names of institutions, corporations, etc. Annotations have been included when it was felt that they might be useful or explanatory.

The sources available in preparing this work have been: the card catalogue of McGill University Library and its general bibliographical collection, a Library of Congress depository catalogue, and lists of bibliographies contributed by the librarians of all the larger libraries of Canada. This list therefore has at least the merit of being a representative one.

Grateful acknowledgment is here made to the librarians who have so kindly assisted us, with especial thanks to Mr. W. S. Wallace, of Toronto University Library, and Mr. Aegidius Fauteux, of the Bibliothèque St. Sulpice, Montreal, who from their exhaustive knowledge of Canadian bibliography have made many valuable suggestions.
